For items whose duties will be reduced by less than 20 percentage points, tariff reductions will be staged as shown in the attached schedule.

For items whose duties will be reduced by 20 to 30 percentage points, the initial reduction will be 30% of the difference between the base rate and final rate. Remaining reductions will be phased in by January 1, 2006, in equal annual installments.

For items whose duties will be reduced by more than 30 percentage points, the initial reduction will be 25% of the difference between the base rate and final rate. Remaining reductions will be phased in by July 1, 2006, in equal annual installments.

Fertilizers

Note: Market Access for fertilizers continues to be under discussion with China.

Tariffs

- China will reduce its tariffs on fertilizer products from a current average of 6% to an average of 4% upon accession.

Quotas

- Quotas will be eliminated upon accession for priority fertilizers and by January 1, 2002 for all other fertilizers.

Distribution

- China generally prohibits companies from distributing imported products or providing related distribution services such as warehousing services. China will permit foreign enterprises to engage in the full range of distribution services for chemical fertilizers after a 5-year transition period. (See separate papers on distribution services and related services.)

Trading Rights

- China has not made any commitment on trading rights at this stage.

Other Commitments

- To alleviate the uncertainty associated with China's inconsistent application, refund, and waivers of its 17% VAT tax, China has agreed to apply all taxes and tariffs uniformly to both domestic and foreign businesses.

Chemicals (Including Fertilizers, Cosmetics, Rubber And Plastics)

Tariffs

- China will reduce average chemical tariffs by more than 50% by January 1, 2005. Specifically, the average rate of 14.74% will be reduced to a final average rate of 6.9%.
- These reductions include reductions on all priority U.S. chemical exports and involve full implementation of more than two-thirds of the 1,100-plus products in the Chemical Tariff Harmonization Agreement (CTHMA) of the Uruguay Round. China will also significantly reduce tariffs on the remaining items.

Quotas

- Quotas will be eliminated on virtually all chemicals upon accession. The remaining quotas on polyethylene terephthalate slices or chips and a few non-priority fertilizer products will be eliminated in 2002.

Trading Rights and Distribution

- Currently, U.S. companies' ability to do business in China is strictly limited because the right to engage in trade (importing and exporting) is restricted to a small number of companies that receive specific authorization or who import goods to be used in production. This limits U.S. exports. China has agreed that any entity will be able to import most products, including chemicals except fertilizers, into any part of China. This commitment is phased in over the three-year period with all entities being permitted to import and export at the end of the period. The right to import chemical fertilizer products is still under negotiation.
- China -- which generally prohibits companies from distributing imported products or providing related distribution services -- will permit foreign enterprises to engage in the full range of distribution services. These rights will be phased in over a three-year period for almost all products, including chemicals. (See separate papers on distribution services and related services.)

Other Commitments

- China has agreed not to apply or enforce export performance, local content, and similar requirements as a condition on importation or investment approval.
- To alleviate the uncertainty associated with China's inconsistent application, refund, and waivers of its 17% VAT tax, China has agreed to apply all taxes and tariffs uniformly to both domestic and foreign businesses.

CORRECTED VERSION

Explanatory Notes on Non-Tariff Measures of Annex 3
